

Future-proof collaboration

Almost everyone is in favor of cooperation, but in practice it is difficult if you are not aware of each other's 20%. This is how you make the difference and for that, you use the added value that every individual contributes. For the sake of convenience, assume that 80% already exists. Future-proof collaboration is about co-creation. An interplay between complementary forces in which you take each other's interests into account.

Co-creating in the context of the lifehack:

- Is not about other people, but you work with each other
- Everyone is part of and contributes to the solution
- The formation is temporary (preferably 3 to 6 months)

Opportunity formations, with a clear goal, in which the personal, social and financial interests are clear, have the best chance of success. Working in such formations prevents polarization or “poldering”. By moving forward step by step in this way, you will reach peaks, because people listen better to each other and the risk of wasting time, money or trust is limited.

Fun fact: hostility between groups can only be resolved with a common goal