

3 x 3 Thinking and Acting

In which world do you want to live? What do you want to work on? How do you want to earn money? Who or what do you need to realize that? Questions you may not be able to answer directly, but which are very important. After all, work is constantly subject to change. That is why, just like everyone else, you feel the pressure to be ready and to remain wanted on the labor market. But why would they choose you? It starts with looking at your work differently and not separating it from your private situation, nor the world around you. After all, these two influence your daily life.

Put your work on the center spot and look at it from three different perspectives.

1. Personal: my work gives me energy; do I have enough time for private life?
2. Socially: do I contribute to a larger goal with my work; am I also committed to my community?
3. Business: do I earn enough money to live the life I want; do I have development opportunities?

Chances are you have many wishes. How nice would it be if they come true? This can be realized by combining the different perspectives, seeing them in conjunction, both in your thinking and in your actions. And above all, to embrace technology.

Fact: Less than 10% of people are consciously planning their future
